

The C-art program returns for its third time, bringing high-quality reproductions from local artists to outdoor venues throughout Highland, Michigan. The images will be on view from now until mid-December 2020. The exhibit is clustered within driving, walking, or biking distance for you to enjoy with your whole family.

C-art is a partnership between Huron Valley Council for the Arts (HVCA) and the Highland Downtown Development Authority and has been a popular community engagement effort. We encourage our many residents and visitors to enjoy art in the place they live, work, and play. HVCA is excited to bring this curated outdoor experience to our community when going into museums and galleries is limited. Our hope is that this will allow families to see and experience artists that they may have never seen and inspire the community to find out more about them.

The Highland DDA is excited to be partnering with the HVCA to bring this exhibit once again to Highland. We advocate for improvement in our area to encourage businesses, residents, and the public alike to want to be here. We strive to create a sense of place returning Highland Station to the center of our community and a destination within the region. Part of our vision at the Highland DDA is to be an active place that promotes health, fitness, and an appreciation for the natural environment, as well as a center for the expression and enjoyment of the arts.
